Bobby’s only son was getting married, but he and his partner, Joanna, feared they couldn’t travel to the wedding. They had fallen behind on their property tax payments after Bobby lost his job and went on disability, and while things were starting to improve, the back taxes still loomed. Finally, someone suggested Coop Fed. Bobby and Joanna described working with Coop Fed as “a piece of cake.” They were approved for a mortgage, caught up with their taxes, and had a manageable monthly payment. They made it to their son’s wedding, after all.

Beer Belly Deli is a cozy neighborhood pub that brought a vacant Westcott Street storefront back to life. Lauren spent five years looking for just this spot. She was an attorney but knew she really wanted to create Beer Belly Deli – a name she first dreamed up back in her teens. But when she and her partner approached banks about money to renovate the space, Lauren recalled, “They just laughed at us.” A friend suggested Cooperative Federal. We reviewed their business plan, visited the site, and a few weeks later, they were approved.
Support and Advice

Financial education and counseling can provide solutions for members working to qualify for loans, stay on track, and reach their financial goals. Since 2006, we have ★ Delivered financial education classes to nearly 6,750 adults and youth.

★ Provided housing or financial counseling to 3,062 households.
★ Provided 1-on-1 business advising to 670 entrepreneurs and business seminars to over 1,000 participants.

Hands-On Learning

Most people learn best from experience, and that’s especially true for young people.

Coop Fed operates student branches at Fowler, Nottingham, and Henninger High Schools, plus a savings program at Ed Smith K-8 School. Members can open Treehouse Saver accounts for their kids at our regular branches, too!

★ 509 children and teens have opened accounts through our youth credit union programs.

For Each; For All

No matter where you live or where you come from, you deserve a credit union that understands your life and believes in you. That’s why Coop Fed’s branches are located in neighborhoods that are under-served by big banks. Our membership includes a growing number of recent immigrants and refugees, from every corner of the globe. Most of our members have modest incomes. And the majority of our members are people of color. Through economic cooperation and mutual aid, we can improve our own lives while working to create a more just world.
